Aiding Yanks

AMOS STRUNK

Amos Strunk is one of the factors that is keeping the crippled Yankees going. Six regulars are now out of the game with everything from a broken bone to a strained side. The ex-Macknism is hitting as of old and is feeling well. He was accused of double-crossing Mack, but the tall taleman said that Amos came to him before he joined the New York contract.

JORDAN HEADS ALL CHINK DIPLOMATS

CHINESE WELCOME RESTORATION OF BRITISH AS DEAN OF CORPS.

PEKING, Aug. 2.—When Li Yuan-hung, the new president, received the foreign representatives at the audience for the first time today, Sir John Jordan, the British minister, who is dean of the diplomatic corps, acted as spokesman at the entrance ministers, a fact which has caused considerable comment on the part of Chinese.

The Peking Daily News says: "We have much pleasure in recording that the most significant event in the first official reception of the new president to the foreign representatives in Peking is the restoration of Sir John Jordan, the British minister, to his honored position as dean of the diplomatic corps in recognition of his leadership. During his absence, Sir John Jordan acted as spokesman for the ministers of the allied powers which means exchange of the relations of Great Britain and Japan towards China. The restoration of the diplomatic presence by the British minister is highly welcomed by the enlightened class of Chinese who do not like to witness the selfish and forward actions of the Japanese representative."

Four of the foreign advisers of President Li Yuan-hung, Dr. W. W. Willoughby and Dr. J. W. Jenkins, both Americans, Dr. George E. Morrison, an Englishman, and Dr. N. Arima, a Japanese, have had many conferences with the president since he entered upon his new office. These advisers have frequently suggested constitutional amendments to the constitution of the republic and call a legislative body at the earliest possible moment.

While Li Yuan-hung is believed to act upon this advice, he is opposed by a number of members of the cabinet. Yuan Shikai ruled China almost entirely by mandate. Although power was vested in him under the so-called provisional constitution, which he enacted to replace the existing provisional constitution. The arbitrary action of Yuan Shikai caused much resentment among progressive Chinese that many of the Chinese advisers of Li Yuan-hung are in a hurry to avoid government in a state as far as possible and endeavor to form legislative power over an assembly or parliament.

China's empty treasury and the hands of unpaid soldiers are a terrible stumbling block to the new president in his effort to put the republic on a peaceful and substantial footing.

Japanese financiers are striving to make China a foreign-owned bank of one hundred million yen, or about $10,000,000. Li Yuan-hung is unwilling to accept the Japanese conditions for Japan and beyond the Chinese American groups which are endeavoring to induce a constitutional bank for China.

While the new president is a real Japanese sympathizer, he would probably provide a strong and powerful ally in the hands of the Japanese. The Japanese are striving to make China a foreign-owned bank of one hundred million yen, or about $10,000,000. Li Yuan-hung is unwilling to accept the Japanese conditions for Japan and beyond the Chinese American groups which are endeavoring to induce a constitutional bank for China.

Although an official report has been made concerning the financial conditions of the Bank of China, they are still unable to resume operations. The bank is still unable to resume operations. The bank is still unable to resume operations.
